How to Ace Employee Certification in Atlassian Confluence

Today companies that invest in employee training open the door to new business opportunities and are more attractive to their potential workforce. These organizations need a way to check the level of skills, experience and expertise of their employees on a continuous basis. Some choose professional certification for that. While it is required for certain professions (doctors, pilots, emergency medical technicians, for example), many employers turn to professional certification voluntarily. ?

LMS Market

If you've been keeping up with the LMS market at all then we're sure you've seen the large growth that's been happening year over year. Case and point, there are now over 700 LMS providers (or even 1,000 depending on who you're asking) in the market.

Employee certification in Confluence

To prepare for internal or third-party certification you can:

1. use a separate learning management system (LMS) to help employees engage with training content
2. encourage your team to get ready on their own
3. create training courses with relevant content in Confluence

If your company uses Atlassian Confluence, you can organize internal certification or set up preparation to a third party professional certification using Courses and Quizzes – LMS for Confluence – create certification training courses and/or certification quizzes (tests). You can make training and certification more appealing for your team because they will use the platform they already know. All you need to do is to populate your Confluence with the proper materials to train and educate your team.
